JS Design Studio Expands, Launches New Site and Services

North Richland Hills, TX – October 1, 2007 – JS Design Studio, an award-winning web design company, marked its four year anniversary with a major expansion of its custom design services and a new interactive website. JSDS has built a reputation in the industry for having the “Midas touch” with start-ups and small businesses, as its distinctive designs and formula for search engine placement have catapulted the growth rates of consumer brands such as “Diapies and Wipees” and “Lionheart Apparel”. With a fiercely loyal client base already in its stable, JSDS has embarked on a multi-tiered expansion geared toward the medical and professional industries, adding features specific to the needs of dental and health care practices, as well as professional firms in the legal, accounting, and finance business.

Tarek Saab, entrepreneur and former star of “The Apprentice”, had the following to say about JSDS: “I’ve used JS Design Studio for three projects now in the last eighteen months, and I’ve referred another half dozen people to them. I think what makes them unique is just how much personal attention they put into each project. Just look at their portfolio - I don’t think they’ve ever had a failure, and I don’t know too many companies that can say that.”

“We are a people-oriented company, and that’s why we have such strong relationships with our clients,” says founder Jon Simpson. “Our sites are developed on one of the most powerful, robust, and easy-to-use open source content management systems on the Internet, and we’ve really mastered the art of the Google search.” When asked about the reason for the expansion, Simpson states, “We just feel there are a lot of similarities between marketing consumer-driven products and service-driven business. In the end, it’s all about connecting with people, about how well you can generate a desired response. You need the right technology, the right people, and most importantly, the ability to listen. It’s not rocket science.”

JSDS has diligently sought out the leading technologies in order to provide the best web sites at an affordable price and with a quick turn around time.
